Space Law—Part 1

Milton:

I just finished reading your article “A Space Law Primer for Colorado Lawyers” in the March 2018 edition of Colorado Lawyer. This was one of the most interesting, concise, easy to read, but jam packed with information articles about such an important topic I've read in this magazine—and maybe any law journal or publication in my many years as an attorney.

I've passed it along to my friends and family, lawyers and non-lawyers, all of whom have responded with enthusiasm similar to mine.

I can't wait for Part 2.

Editors' Note: The wait is over. Part 2 on U.S. space law begins on page 43 of this issue.

In Memoriam

CL Editors:

I see you've changed the format of Colorado Lawyer, and one thing I feel is missing is the In Memoriam section highlighting attorneys, judges, and legal personnel who have recently passed away. Especially as I've gotten older, I've found it a nice feature in the magazine, because sometimes you hear about these attorneys and sometimes you don't. I hope you consider putting it back in Colorado Lawyer.

Hi Dave,

We're pleased to continue In Memoriam. We generally rely on our membership to notify us when a member of the legal community passes away, and we print information as it is received. So, we don't always have content for this section in each issue.

Readers should send notices about recently deceased attorneys, judges, and other legal professionals to Susie Klein at sklein@cobar.org. Longer “tributes” highlighting the contributions of these professionals are also welcome.

COURTROOM SPACE

The Colorado and Denver Bar Associations have secured space at the Denver City and County building in courtroom 117 for members' use as a practice space.

To reserve time email hfolker@cobar.org. A 24-hour notice is recommended. The courtroom is available weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Courtroom 117 is not available on Tuesdays and Thursdays and every third Wednesday of the month.
